Encyclopedia, 8 vols.,	New International

It has been the aim of your trustees to obtain the newest and best books for the library, and place them in circulation at the earliest moment possible.

We have received during the year eight volumes more of the New International Encyclopedia, making fourteen volumes in the library at present. Fifty-three volumes have been rebound and the remainder are in good condition.

REPORT OF SCHOOL BOARD.

Three hundred dollars was raised last year in addition to that required by law and appropriated for repairs.

The schoolhouses at Buck street and at Pembroke Street have been renovated, the grained woodwork in the village schoolhouse varnished, considerable painting done, frozen pipes thawed out and repaired, and new outside steps built for the same, and some minor repairs made at the Brickett, Borough, and North Pembroke schoolhouses at an expense of $173.13.

We have a balance in the treasury of $521.95. The balance in the treasury at the beginning of the financial year was $298.60.

We have not found it necessary to open an overflow school at the village this year. We are of the opinion that more room will soon be needed for the lower grades in this school. The unfortunate location of the present schoolhouse prevents its enlargement, and to pay rent and open a school elsewhere is expensive and very unsatisfactory.

Much time and considerable money has been expended to prevent freezing in the water closets and basement of this schoolhouse, all of which has failed to accomplish the object sought. Artificial heat more powerful than electric lights should be introduced.

We believe the school district of Pembroke is well able and is in duty bound to provide a safe and suitable playground for the one hundred and forty or more pupils attending school in the village. As this cannot be done on or around the lot occupied by the present schoolhouse, we feel warranted, after coupling this fact with the conditions mentioned above, in suggesting to the taxpayers of the district that we build a new school building, located on a large lot, at a good distance from the line of the electric railroad, which is a source of danger at the present location.

We believe the amount of school money required to be raised by law will be sufficient for all common school purposes, unless extensive repairs or changes are made on the village schoolhouse.

It is held to be more proper that the tuition of high school pupils be paid from the school district rather than the town treasury, as heretofore. Should this be done, and the town refrain from making the usual appropriation for the purpose, it will be necessary that it be voted by the school district.

The union with Pittsfield for a supervisory district has been continued, with Frank H. Benedict as superintendent, at the same salary as last year. We think our schools have made marked improvement along all lines, under his supervision, and that we should retain his services if possible.

We respectfully refer you to the superintendent's report as to the condition of and statistics relating to our schools which is herewith submitted.

REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDENT.

To the School Board :

GENTLEMEN.—I have the honor of herewith submitting the third annual report from this office upon the work and condition of the public schools of Pembroke.

We are passing through an age of experiment in all things. That which we hailed as new and valuable yesterday is old, out of date, and valueless to-day; so rapid and telling have been the experimental investigations of men, battling competitively and vitally interested in handling the gigantic problems of the commercial world. Educational work has not felt any lack of the spirit of the age. The greatest educators, the greatest minds of this country, of the world, have consulted together, are consulting together, that the systems of education may be as effective as possible.

If we pause to examine the results we find much to commend and some to condemn. Some methods of instruction have proved failures; so have some mechanical inventions failed to have a commercial value. But each has left something valuable, or has aided in leading to methods and inventions of worth.

In spite of all that our boasted educational growth has done the fact remains that the child mind is unchanged. Children possessing all grades of mental ability are still in the school-room—the robust, mischievous boy, the delicate, nervous girl, now and then a born scholar, the practical-minded, the dolt.

Trained teachers know this child mind in all its forms better than heretofore, and are better able to stimulate it to action. The child is no longer a barbarian to be conquered or broken. Boys with “energy plus” are not considered ugly miscreants, but every effort is made to direct that surplus energy into useful channels. Work is the watchword and weapon of the well-regulated school. Teachers are not to be mere dispensers of facts but guides to those mental processes which we call reasoning; guardians of that long period of absorption and assimilation which lays the foundation for it. The modern ideal school is a place where children are to grow into greater things through activity, with the flower of our young womanhood as director, never hastening, never retarding development.

The public at large has been educated by the efforts of educational leaders so that it now demands broad-minded, refined, and spiritual women for teachers. Women that can organize, systematize, and perfect.

Comfortable and pleasant school buildings are the order. School books, beautifully illustrated, are almost all that heart can wish.

After all there is something in the work that does not satisfy. Pupils do not acquire that practical training that fits them for any pursuit as soon as they enter the field of labor. Educators have long since turned their minds to manual training and domestic science, and are testing the merits of each. This is so as to increase the utility of the schools. Instruction in these lines holds one of the first places in the minds of educators.

There is a call for better moral and spiritual training, for physical and social development, for products of the heart and soul as well as of the mind and hand.

It is a noteworthy fact that places of trust and responsibility are filled by our younger men. The world turns to the young man or woman, fresh from fields of study and training, full of energy and enthusiasm, to perform its more difficult tasks. Higher education is demanded from those who are to enter professional pursuits.

To meet these new conditions educators have endeavored to shorten the period of grammar school training and still send the children forth as well or better equipped for the more difficult work of mature years. The result is that the average age of graduation under a well-regulated system is fourteen and one half years. The many ills to which children are subject keeps this somewhat higher than it otherwise would be.

Viewed in the light of the foregoing statements I find that our children are comfortably and pleasantly housed; that they are well supplied with books and other material; that we do no manual training and little drawing; that we lack somewhat in reference books and pictures; that our teachers possess the modern spirit, are eager to try the new and are yet conservative; that we have a system of instruction that is working satisfactorily; that the average age of our graduating class is fourteen and one half years—the only lamentable thing about the last being the smallness of the class and the fact that but one boy completes the course.

Under such conditions we should see the growth and maturity in our children that gladdens the heart of every teacher and parent. I can report to you that this is the case. Advancement in all classes and in all schools has been steady and healthful during the year.

The work of the year is showing the benefits to be derived from a systematic arrangement of instruction. The ease with which new subjects have been taken, the evidences of thorough work, the smallness of the loss felt by the many unavoidable changes in teachers have given me great satisfaction and the courage to further perfect the system.

I see no need of any unusual expenditures the coming year unless something be done to improve the sanitary conditions of the Suncook building. It will be well to freshen the Brickett and Pembroke hill rooms by painting and whitewashing. New floors would be very acceptable in the two upper rooms of the Suncook building.

You have seen fit to give the pupils the benefit of two more weeks' schooling. I believe this to be a wise move. Two weeks more of instruction means much when everything is in running order.

Last June six pupils graduated from the grammar department and were granted certificates of graduation. This innovation is apparently a strong stimulus to some pupils to complete the work of the grades.

Of those pupils who have entered higher institutions of learning from this class, all are doing satisfactory work. This should give us much satisfaction.

During the fall and spring terms the attendance was all that we can hope for, but the winter has been broken by much illness. In most cases pupils have been in their places unless absent for some good reason.

It is to be expected, as your superintendent, that I should make some suggestions for the improvement of the schools.

It seems to me that in order to secure and retain the services of competent teachers it will be necessary to advance the salary rather than to diminish it. An investigation as to this matter in towns of this size, reveals the fact that our salaries are slightly below the average. There is one highly commendable condition about this, however, the rural schools command a higher wage with us.

One important change should be made. Our terms need to be arranged so that there will be no recess at Thanksgiving time. A two or three weeks' stop during the holidays is far more desirable. The work of the schools demands this.

Ideal parents, ideal pupils, and ideal teachers make ideal schools. Such is a possibility but not a reality. However, I take great pleasure in commending the work of the teachers and pupils. It has been enthusiastically prosecuted. The teachers have felt the responsibility of directing young minds toward higher things and have seemed to realize that they are not dealing with simply a mind but with a body and a soul, with the eternal as well as the earthly.

FRANK HOWE BENEDICT,

Superintendent.
